Library to Offer Local Author Fair

New Braunfels, TX - The New Braunfels Public Library will host a Local Author Fair on Tuesday, November 17th, from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m., in the library's meeting room. Members of the community will have the opportunity to hear local writers discuss their writing, their experience with the world of publishing, and their own writing process. In addition, the authors who have been chosen to participate in the event will have the opportunity to read short passages from their published works and answer questions from members of the audience. At the conclusion of the event, members of the audience will be able to meet with writers individually and purchase books.

“The library is pleased to offer our second Local Author Fair, and we hope there's enough interest that we will be able make this a regular event. Our library now includes a local author collection, and we are happy to encourage published writers in our community to have a place in our library's collection and in library programming,” said Library Director Gretchen Pruett. “With this program the library is connecting writers with other writers and encouraging self-expression and creativity.”

For more information about this event, contact Public Service Librarian Ben Pensiero at 830-221-4325 or Youth Services Librarian Jenny Rodriguez at 830-221-4314.
