Staff Completes Texas Recreation and Park Society Academy of Leadership

New Braunfels, Texas – The City of New Braunfels Parks Superintendent, J.D. Davis, was recently honored for completing the year-long Texas Recreation and Park Society (TRAPS) Academy of Leadership in a ceremony at the association’s annual institute in Irving on March 1, 2017.

The graduating class was comprised of 16 individuals, who were selected via an application process and committee review. The TRAPS Academy of Leadership Development was created to build a community of professionals committed to effective leadership, while engaging in a culture of lifelong learning, creative thinking, and achieving the highest level of respect and recognition. Several educational events were held over the course of the last year where Mr. Davis received training on a multitude of topics from financial success and problem-solving to insightful and intentional leadership. Davis has been employed by the Parks and Recreation Department since 2012.

“We are proud of J.D. for his completion of the TRAPS Academy of Leadership,” said Parks and Recreation Director Stacey Dicke. “J.D. is a tremendous asset to the department and works continually to improve the operation of our park system.”

TRAPS is a nonprofit 501(c)3 professional organization, committed to advancing the field of parks, recreation and leisure services in Texas, while advocating for enhanced recreation opportunities and the increase of public green space for Texans.
