Guadalupe River (in New Braunfels) Open for Recreation

New Braunfels, Texas — The Guadalupe River (inside the city limits of New Braunfels) is now open for recreation, including tubing. The Comal River remains closed until further notice while crews work to remove debris as well as make repairs from damage caused by the weather occurring over the weekend.

Both rivers were previously closed in anticipation of expected severe weather as a result of Hurricane Harvey. Currently the Guadalupe River is flowing at 381cfs in New Braunfels.

An updated release will be sent once the Comal River is reopened.

Authority: Jacob Pullen – Support Services Lieutenant
